Nicole from India tells us her experience:

“We were in the food store and there was a very little girl who was asking for something, but no one listened to her because she was so small and it was so noisy in the store.

So I asked her what she wanted, and then I told the shopkeeper what she needed and paid for it with my own money.

When I handed her the package of food, she gave me a big smile and I was very happy, too.”
