Fadi from Egypt tells us:

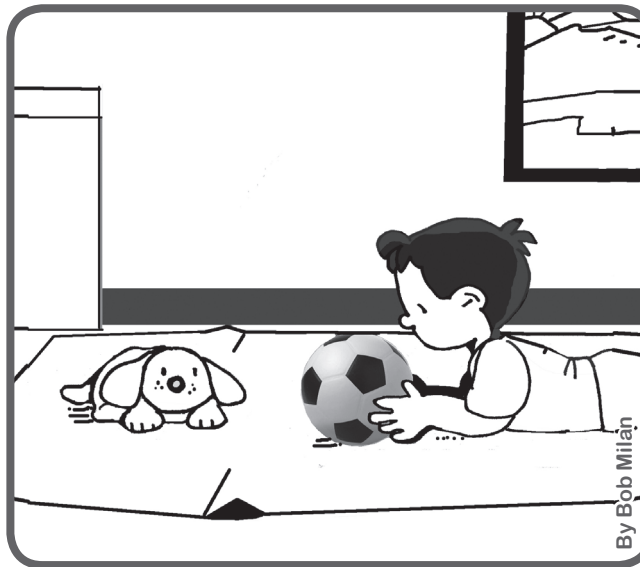

“One day I went to a fair at our parish and I won a soccer ball. I was very happy even though I already had one. When I got home, my mum told me that this was a special feast day for Muslims and she suggested that I could give this new ball to Amin, a little boy who came every day to do odd jobs for people in our neighbourhood.

It was the first time I had ever won a ball and it was a very good one. I thought, “Maybe I can give him the old one.” I thought about it all evening.

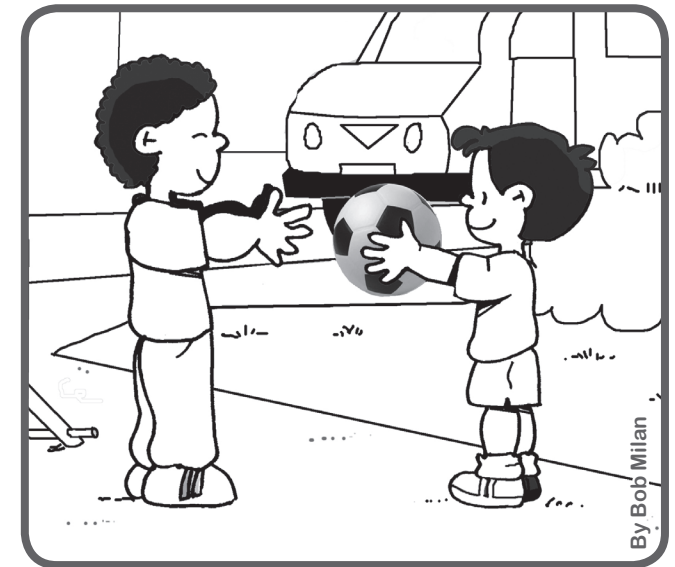

In the end, I understood that if I gave the new ball to Amin, I would be doing an act of love for Jesus and so I did it, and we started playing with it together
